this collection offers the fruits of a stimulating workshop that sought to bridge the fraught relationship which sometimes continues between anthropologists and indigenous native aboriginal scholars despite areas of overlapping interest participants from around the world share their views and opinions on subjects ranging from ideas for reconciliation the question of what might constitute a universal science indigenous heritage postcolonial museology the boundaries of the term indigeneity different senses as ways of knowing and the very issue of writing as a method of dissemination that divides and excludes readers from different backgrounds this book represents a landmark step in the process of replacing bridges with more equal patterns of intercultural cooperation and communication anthropology is usually associated with the study of society but the anthropologist must also understand people as individuals this highly original study demonstrates how methods of social analysis can be applied to the individual while remaining entirely distinct from psychology and other perspectives on the person contributors draw on approaches from material culture to create fascinating portraits of individuals offering analytical insights that convey ethnographic encounters with often extraordinary people from turkey spain and britain to albania cuba jamaica mali serbia and trinidad exploring relationships to places and spaces such as social networking sites to persons such as parents to ethical concerns such as fairness and to concepts such as the ideology of struggle anthropology and the individual shows how the study of the individual can provide insights into society without losing a sense of the particularity of the person the present book is no ordinary anthology but rather a workroom in which anthropologists and philosophers initiate a dialogue on trust and hope two important topics for both fields of study the book combines work between scholars from different universities in the u s and denmark thus besides bringing the two disciplines in dialogue it also cuts across differences in national contexts and academic style the interdisciplinary efforts of the contributors demonstrate how such a collaboration can result in new and challenging ways of thinking about trust and hope reading the dialogues may therefore also inspire others to work in the productive intersection between anthropology and philosophy the relationship between law and anthropology can be considered as having been particularly intimate in this book the authors defend their assertion that the two fields co exist in a condition of balanced reciprocity wherein each makes important contributions to the successful practice and theory of the other anthropology for example offers a cross culturally validated generic concept of law and clarifies other important legal concepts such as religion and human rights law similarly illuminates key anthropological ideas such as the social contract and provides a uniquely valuable access point for the analysis of sociocultural systems legal practice renders a further important benefit to anthropology when it validates anthropological knowledge through the use of anthropologists as expert witnesses in the courtroom and the introduction of the culture defense against criminal charges although the actual relationship between anthropology and law today falls short of this idealized state of balanced reciprocity the authors include historical and other data suggesting that that level of intimate cooperation draws ever closer
